Opening Doors for Women in Leadership

As female leaders, do we have the will and the courage to ensure that our actions reflect our stated values and belief systems within the educational system? This workshop will provide a forum to delve into the unintentional practices that marginalize female women in leadership, and the female staff / students who we are privileged to serve. The presentation will pull together practices related to contextual factors of diversity, equity, access and inclusion that relate specifically to a female leader's primary role. Join the journey of one superintendent's commitment and ability as the first woman superintendent in a large school district to ensure equity, access and inclusion for all members of the school and district communities. The presentation will focus on the unique qualities, challenges and abilities that women leaders possess to create and lead a culture that opens doors for all.

Outcomes:

- Participants will have a greater understanding of practices that open doors for all students through the lens of female leadership.
- Participants will build on and expand equity practices for females within our own schools and districts.
- Participants will clearly understand the relationship of values and action to the tools of a culturally proficient female leader.
- Participants will engage in dialogue that highlights the unique qualities, challenges and abilities of the female leader.

Suggested Audience: Leaders at all levels
